

ABSTRACT

By using an acceleration detector 51 incorporating mass members respectively capable of detecting impact acceleration applied from different directions, the impact acceleration applied on the vehicle from the different directions is detected with one acceleration detector. The installation space of the acceleration detector in a car compartment sensor unit 6 is reduced. Moreover, the increases in costs and weight are suppressed.